

JOURNAL OF A SUSTAINABLE GLOBAL SOUTH

Reflecting current problems of global development - climate change, geographic restructuring, migration, adaptive urbanism, social justice and other dominant issues, the journal is focused on issues pertaining to sustainable development of the third world countries in the context of evolving social, cultural, economic and spatial conditions. It therefore embraces studies that deepen our understanding of cultural and socially empathetic forms of development. So its focus is on sustainable living environments, urban and rural growth, economy, spatial restructuring, and infrastructure, the use of resources, as well as disaster mitigation and management. The journal is published twice annually in February and September, by the Institute for Research and Community Service, Udayana University. This is a refereed journal. All published articles have been through a blind refereeing process and in line with international best practice.
